natural attraction

An aerial photograph of the mouth of the Ebro River. The water is a deep blue-green color, and the sky is a soft, hazy blue. Two small boats are visible in the water, leaving white wakes behind them. The riverbanks are visible on both sides, with some marshy areas and small islands.

An aerial photograph of Fangar's bay at sunset. The sun is low on the horizon, creating a bright, golden glow that reflects off the water. Numerous long, parallel rows of mussel beds are visible, extending from the foreground towards the horizon. The beds are made of metal frames and are spaced out across the bay.

NATURAL AND UNIQUE LANDSCAPES

Deltebre is the best place to discover nature thanks to its location in the heart of the Ebro Delta National Park.

HIGH NATURAL VALUE

The Ebro Delta is the most important wetland in Catalonia and the second one in the Iberian Peninsula.

LAND OF COLOURS

The rice cycle characterises the colour of the landscapes. Blue spring, green summer, yellow end of summer and earthy winter.

SOURCE OF LIFE

Up to 343 species of birds seen and more than 500 of different species of vegetation, including the main product of the territory, the rice.

ENDLESS HORIZON

The landscape is characterised by flat lands which gives them a peculiar and unique aspect in all Catalonia.

RIVER OF LIFE

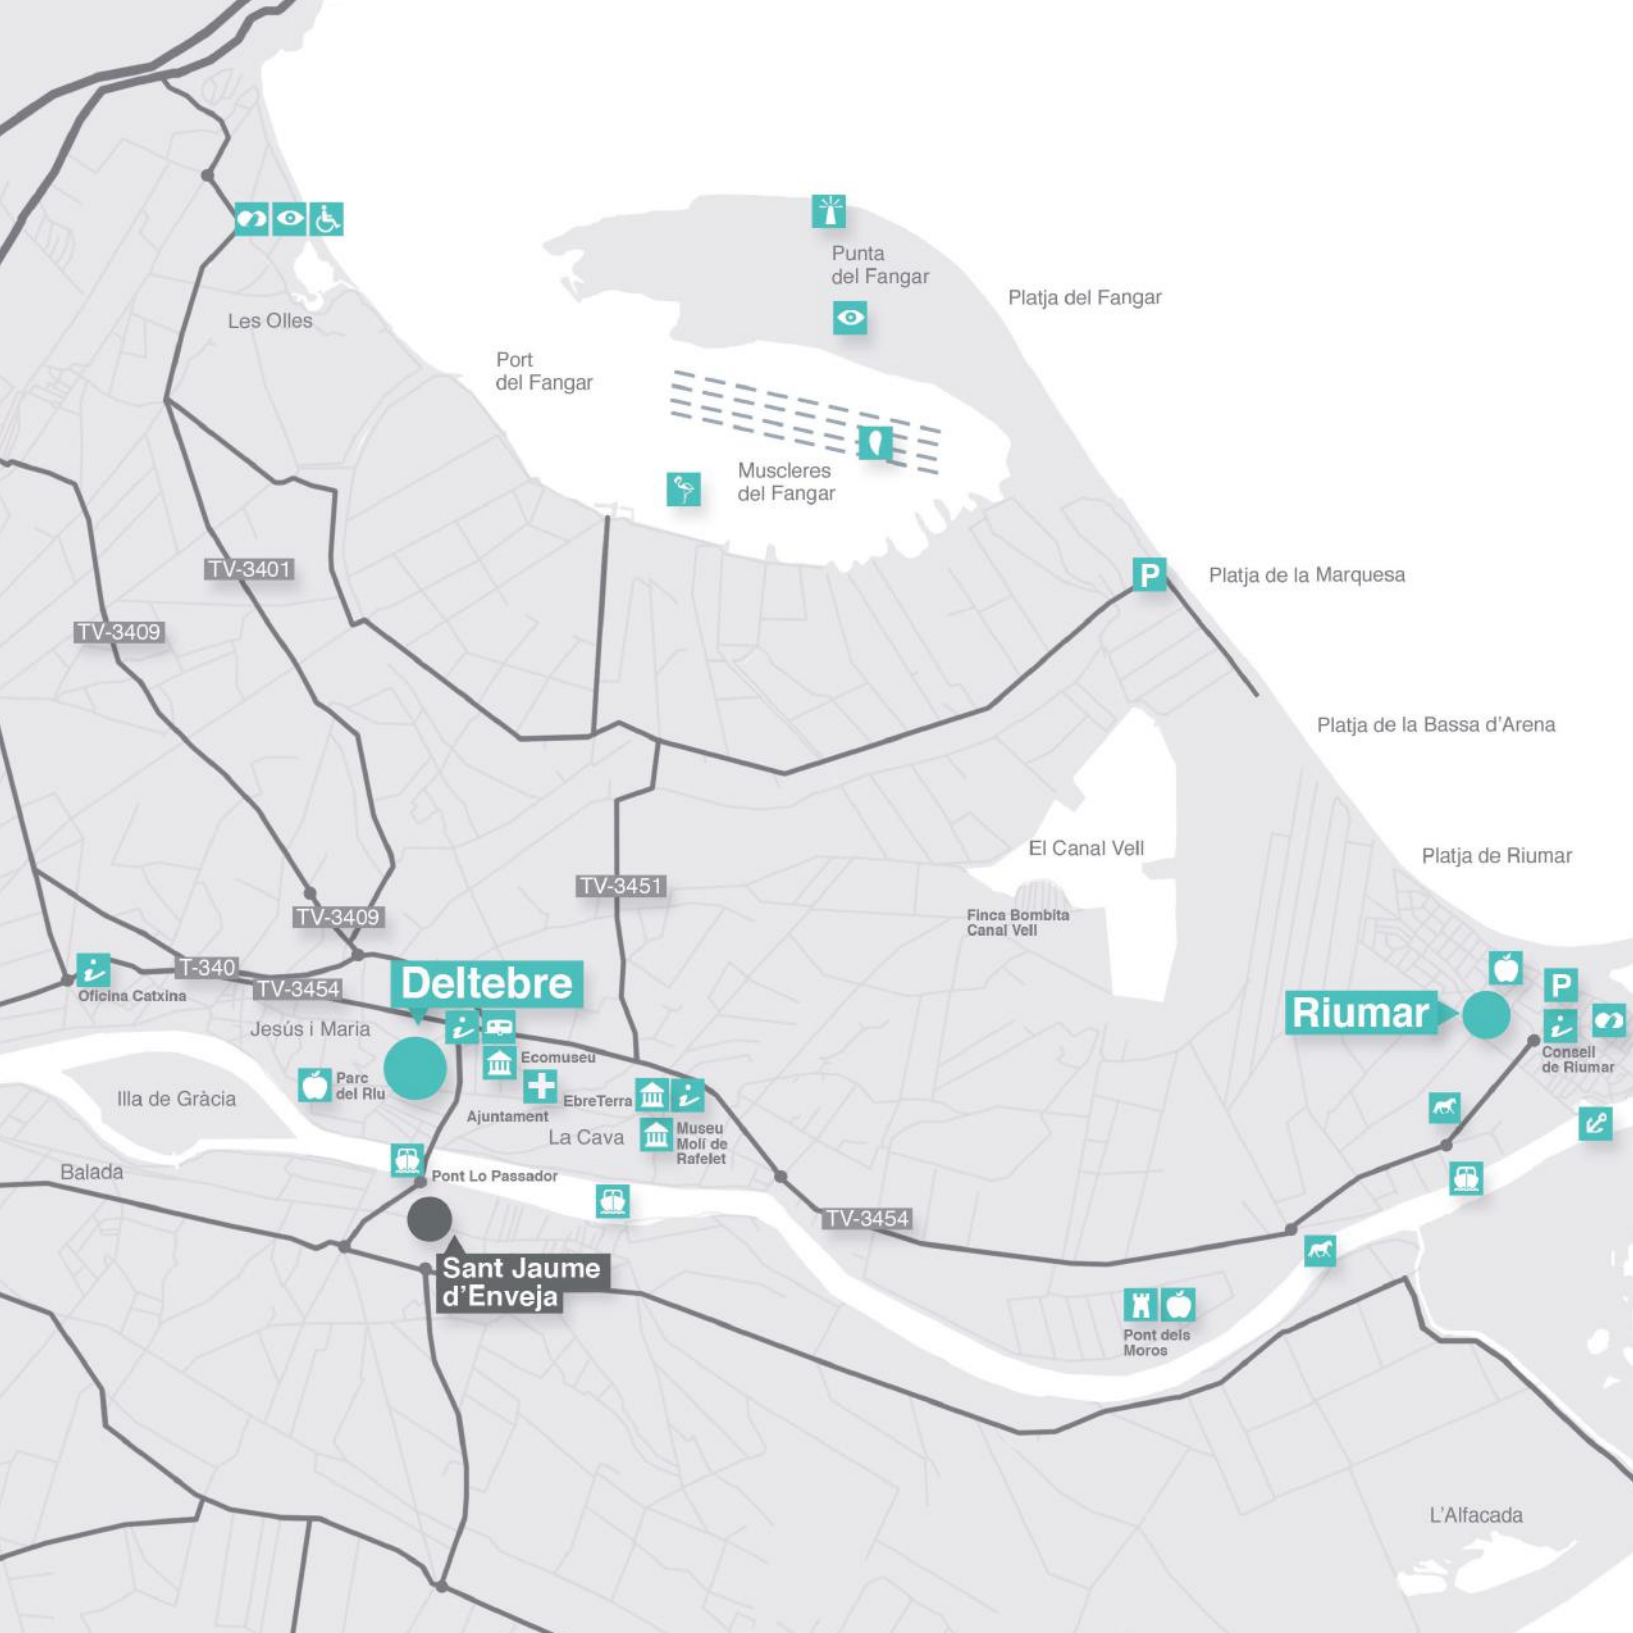

The Ebro River arrives to its mouth in the Delta, where it covers Deltebre's lands and creates a wonderful landscape full of wetlands, ricefields, fine sand beaches...

ECO-FRIENDLY

Deltebre is a sustainable quality tourism destination. It is supported by the European Charter for Sustainable Tourism and the title of European Destination of Excellence.

TERRES DE L'EBRE BIOSPHERE RESERVE

In only 30 km of distance, Els Ports Natural Park and the Ebro Delta National Park offer a great landscape diversity covering from sandy areas and wetlands to the mountains at 1,500 m high.
